

Project #1: For my first project which was the Image project. After reading the critiques and re-reading my in-progress submission there are many aspects I would revise. The first part that I am thinking about redoing is my favicon I created for the project. Many of my friends said the color scheme and name I picked was good; they just couldn't see the actual icon symbol because it was too small. The next thing I need to do is fix my headers, they don't link to anything. I think I am going to re-write my about me page and go more in depth so my website can get to know me better and I am planning on adding more images on my pages from my travels and with those photos I am going to add in depth descriptions to each talking about the highlights of each place. Finally for all my travel blogs I need to put them in their own specific categories like my digital engagement posts.

Project #2: The second project that I completed was a visual project. After reading through my reflection and in progress I feel like there is not much I would change but there are maybe a few things that could be polished up. For example, I really liked the poster image I created on canva, I think it went well with the aesthetic that I wanted my vlog to be. I also would keep the music in the background that I picked and would not switch it to a voice over of me speaking about my day. The only elements I would fix would be, definitely making the length of my video a bit longer. I don't think I added enough elements to the video; the only thing is it goes against what my goals for the video was. Those goals were to make a vlog that wasn't too long for people to watch so they didn't get uninterested.

Project #3: The last project that I did was my audio project. After reading my in-progress, my reflection and the comments from the professor there are a few aspects that I would need to revise. These are, I would like to do more research on the topic and then use that research to add more examples of what I was speaking about to give my audience more context. The second aspect I would like to polish up would be re-wording manying of my statements because like my professor said it was a bit awkward so I would want it to be a smooth process and understanding for others. In my audio project I also want to add more questions to ask to the listeners and then possibly add another episode to my project to add more information and be able to do different perspectives in episodes and in those episodes possibly bring guest speakers on to add more to the topic.

Final Website Reflection:

For my final website as I reflect on my goals for it and what I have already accomplished and what I need to accomplish I think I really only need to fix a few aspects. First like I said above for my first project I need to revise my favicon and make it easier to see the symbol, maybe even fix the color scheme if it helps the visibility. Second, I need to add the links to all my projects because they are not connected yet and I also need to add a specific tab for all my travel photos like I did for my digital engagement posts. Third, I need to add more photos and descriptions of those photos to my website. Overall I want my website to be a personal vlog showing my favorite travel spots and show my personality on my website with my about me page and pictures of my friends and family traveling.
